Accredited Counselors of Thailand (ACT)

A non-profit initiative upholding international accreditation standards in Thailand

What is ACT?

Accredited Counselors of Thailand (ACT) is an independent, non-profit initiative under the LEAF Foundation (est. 2012), dedicated to offering Thai national and resident counselors the opportunity to obtain certified accreditation according to international standards through an extensive registration process for individuals and organizations.

ACT exists to support registered and accredited counselors in Thailand and surrounding countries, as well as to elevate, empower, and educate members of the general public who have a special interest in the counseling field.

Through education, networking, and best practice sharing, ACT stimulates counselors in Thailand to uphold the highest standards of accountability in their counseling career. With five membership levels, counselors can continue to grow in experience and depth of knowledge, sharing their expertise as valuable members of the ACT community.

Our Mission

ACT values the importance of accredited counseling services in promoting mental health and wellbeing. Our mission is to make accreditation the standard practice in Thailand in order to improve the quality of counseling, ensure accountability, and provide both local and international support for counselors. ACT aspires to foster partnerships across borders in order to establish a shared standards framework for the Asian context in collaboration with APAC partners in the future.

Our Values

At ACT, we are committed to:

1. Quality: We strive to provide the best service to anyone who asks for counseling, and are working to ensure the highest quality of accreditation for Thai counselors.

2. Ethical Standards: We are committed to upholding the highest ethical standards through honesty, accountability, transparency, confidentiality, and fairness in our accreditation processes.

3. Support & Empowerment: We believe in empowering counselors by providing them with the necessary tools, resources, and support to reach their full potential and to receive equal opportunities.

4. Collaboration: ACT aims to build a culture of collaboration and partnership for the development of the counseling field in Thailand, working closely with local as well as international counselors, associations, educational institutions, and more.

5. Diversity and Inclusion: At ACT we embrace diversity and promote inclusivity. We do not tolerate any form of discrimination and we expect counselors accredited with us to uphold the same values.

6. Development: We are dedicated to continuous learning, improvement, and development. Our accreditation process will be consistently updated according to current international standards and in order to meet the needs of the community.

7. Advocacy: We advocate for the importance of accreditation in providing mental health and wellbeing services in Thailand, as well as raising awareness and reducing stigma to the best of our ability.

What is ACT Accreditation?

Purpose & Use

ACT accreditation is a credential granted by the Accredited Counselors of Thailand (ACT) to qualified counselors in Thailand who meet the criteria. The purpose of obtaining ACT accreditation is to legally and ethically provide counseling services. Accreditation demonstrates that the holder has met the educational, clinical, and ethical standards required to practice counseling competently and safely. Counselors can apply to be a registered or accredited counselor depending on their level of experience.

Additionally, ACT accreditation meets international counseling standards, widening the scope of opportunity for counselors in Thailand and possibly increasing opportunities to expand their practice abroad. Please note that while ACT is working towards transferable credits across the APAC region in the future, local laws and licensing rules always apply.

A registered counselor refers to a professional who has met the standard requirements regarding education, training, and ethical standards in providing counseling services. Registration is essential as it enhances credibility, fosters trust with clients, and ensures that counselors operate within legal and professional boundaries.

An accredited counselor goes one step further: this is a highly experienced counselor who has been practicing under supervision for at least five years and has made significant contributions to the field of counseling.

Membership, Registration, and Accreditation

ACT membership is open to any individuals and organizations in the counseling field, regardless of their accreditation status. There are five membership levels at ACT to encourage both novice and experienced counselors to begin their accreditation journey. Each level has different requirements which reflect the counselor's experience and excellence in their field, as summarized below. The full list of requirements can be found in the overview on the next pages.

- Fellow Member (FM) – An FM is a retired counselor who previously held accredited counselor (AC) status and was nominated by other ACT members to be a Fellow Member in their retirement. Those nominated as an FM must have at least one publication or other notable contribution in the field of counseling. Fellow Members take few to no clients but remain involved in the field and in guiding other counselors through supervision or by giving workshops, courses, keynotes, seminars, etc. Members with FM are veterans in the mental health field and although they no longer have an active accreditation with ACT, they are listed in the ACT online registry with honors.

- Accredited Counselor (AC) – An AC is an advanced counselor with vast experience in the field and a deep understanding of all aspects of counseling. Members with AC status have demonstrated a strong commitment to the advancement of counseling practice and are accredited and listed in the ACT online registry with distinction.

- Registered Counselor (RC) – An RC is an experienced counselor with a considerable number of client contact hours who has demonstrated their commitment to ethical, accountable practice. Members with RC status are registered and listed in the ACT online registry.

- Associate Member (AM) – An AM is an individual in a field other than counseling with an interest in therapy, psychology, or mental health who has completed at least one ACT-approved course. Please note that members with AM status are not certified mental health professionals and are not listed in the ACT online registry.

- Junior Member (JM) – A JM is a novice counselor who is pursuing or has just completed their degree in Counseling or a related field and is interested in gaining experience and learning from other counselors. Please note that members with JM status are not certified and are not listed in the ACT online registry.

Eligible ACT members who wish to show their commitment to international standards of practice may apply to become a Registered Counselor (RC) or Accredited Counselor (AC). Those who complete this process will be granted ACT certification, which signifies that the individual has undergone a rigorous accreditation process and has demonstrated proficiency in counseling practice, ethical conduct, and adherence to the professional standards set by ACT in accordance with the British Association for Counseling and Psychotherapy (BACP) ScopEd Framework. Organizations who complete the accreditation process will receive an ACT accreditation badge confirming the same.

ACT accreditation serves as recognition of a member's expertise and commitment to uphold the highest standards of professionalism and ethical conduct in their counseling practice. It provides assurance to clients and employers that the counselor or organization has met the international standard requirements and is equipped with the necessary skills and knowledge to provide effective counseling.

Application Deadlines

Members of ACT can apply for accreditation by submitting all the required documents by November 15th of each year, which will be reviewed by independent, qualified supervisors before being approved by the ACT board. Application forms will be provided in both Thai and English; the applicant may submit their documents in either of these languages. Once the documents have been approved, applicants will be invited for a personal interview to demonstrate their understanding of the field in a real-time setting. Results will be communicated individually, followed by a public announcement or graduation ceremony the following year.

Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs)

"Why should I become a member of ACT?"

Joining ACT is essential for counselors in Thailand who are committed to maintaining professional standards, ethical practice, and accountability in their work. By becoming a member, you ensure that you are part of a network dedicated to upholding the highest standards in counseling, gaining access to resources that enhance your practice and ensuring your clients that you are qualified.

"Can I become a counselor by taking a short online course?"

While there are many short courses available internationally due to the growing interest in mental health, becoming a qualified counselor involves years of education, practice, proper supervision, and accountability. Counseling is not just about theoretical knowledge; it requires practical skills, ethical standards, and professional oversight to ensure client safety. Taking shortcuts can harm not only your professional reputation but, more importantly, your clients' mental and physical wellbeing.

"Why do I need a counseling network?"

Engaging with other professionals provides an invaluable opportunity to share knowledge, insights, and effective strategies from diverse perspectives, enabling you to improve your practice and grow as a counselor. This collaborative approach fosters continuous learning, enhances professional competency, encourages innovation in addressing challenges within the field, and opens doors to partnerships and referrals.

"How much does it cost to become a registered or accredited counselor?"

The cost of becoming a registered or accredited counselor varies significantly by country, ranging anywhere from 3000 - 10,000 THB per year across different regions for membership alone. In addition to a yearly membership fee, the process requires extensive education — a bachelor's degree in Counseling, Psychology, or a related field, followed by a master's degree in Counseling or Psychology, supervised hours, and ongoing professional development.

ACT keeps membership fees affordable thanks to the sponsorship of the LEAF Foundation, making it accessible for counselors in Thailand to pursue accreditation without undue financial burden. Please note that any external costs to maintain accreditation status, such as Supervision or CPD courses, are to be covered by the applicants themselves. ACT charges an annual membership fee for all members, as well as a one-time application fee for RC and AC applicants. The membership fee helps to compensate supervisors who generously give their time to review the applications. Our annual prices for each membership tier are listed below:

- Fellow Member (FM) – 1,000 THB (no application fee)
- Accredited Counselor (AC) – 4,000 THB (2,500 THB application fee)
- Registered Counselor (RC) – 2,000 THB (1,000 THB application fee)
- Associate Member (AM) – 1,000 THB (no application fee)
- Junior Member (JM) – Free of charge (no application fee)

"What are the insurance requirements in Thailand?"

ACT recommends all practicing counselors obtain professional liability insurance to protect themselves and their clients. Please consult local insurance providers in Thailand to ensure compliance with Thai regulations and secure adequate coverage.

"What's the difference between a psychologist, psychiatrist, and a counselor? Do they all need licenses?"

Psychologists, psychiatrists, and counselors all work in the mental health field, but they have different roles, training, and ways of helping people.

- Psychologists have a minimum 6-year master's degree or doctoral degree (Ph.D. or Psy.D.) in Psychology. They are trained to assess, diagnose, and treat mental health issues through talk therapy, often using specific therapeutic techniques. They don't prescribe medication but may work with psychiatrists or other healthcare providers for that. They need a license to practice, which usually requires passing a national exam. Clinical psychologists in Thailand must be licensed with the Department of Mental Health (DMH).
- Psychiatrists are medical doctors (MD or DO) who specialize in mental health. They can prescribe medications, offer therapy, and diagnose mental illnesses. Their medical training allows them to understand the physical aspects of mental health issues, like how brain chemistry impacts behavior. In Thailand, psychiatrists must be licensed with the Medical Council of Thailand (TMC).
- Counselors typically have a master's degree in counseling or a related field. They focus on providing support and therapy for issues like stress, anxiety, or relationship problems. Some counselors may specialize in specific areas (e.g. marriage, addiction, disordered eating), and they may use a range of therapeutic tools such as CBT, EMDR, somatic approach, person-centered therapy, and more. Counselors don't prescribe medication but may work with psychiatrists or other healthcare providers for that. Like psychologists, they also need to be licensed in many countries, which involves completing a specific number of supervised hours and professional development. In Thailand, there is currently no licensing mandate for counselors, but ACT hopes to make accreditation the standard practice.

In short, while they all work with mental health, psychologists and psychiatrists have more extensive medical training, and counselors tend to provide more direct support for everyday issues. All of them need licenses to practice in most places, though the exact requirements can vary by country.

"What's the difference between a coach and a counselor?"

While both coaches and counselors support personal growth, their roles differ significantly. Counselors are trained to address emotional and psychological issues, often working with clients to overcome trauma, mental health challenges, or relational conflicts. This requires formal education, accreditation, and adherence to ethical standards. Coaches, on the other hand, focus on helping clients achieve specific goals, such as career advancement or personal development, and are not equipped to address complex mental health issues.

How to Fill Out This Application Successfully

Guidelines for Professional Language and Confidentiality

Counselors should always strive to employ professional, neutral, and appropriate language that makes a distinction between the objective observations of the session and the subjective interpretation of the therapist. For the purpose of this application, use academic language as much as possible, unless directly quoting a client, for example in a case study or case notes.

1.Case Study (2,000-3,000 words)

- Academic Citation – please note that academic citation is only required for the Case Study. Use APA, Harvard, Chicago, or MLA format for all academic notations and citations.
  - Guidelines on APA formatting
  - Guidelines on Harvard formatting
  - Guidelines on Chicago formatting
  - Guidelines on MLA formatting
- Support your methodologies with credible sources, including recent research and applied theories. A case study must correctly cite 3-5 credible sources, such as counseling literature, published research journals, or practicum videos.
- Avoid subjective opinions and informal language. For instance, avoid phrases like “I think/I feel” when writing session summaries. Example:
  - Formal: The client expressed experiencing profound grief related to the recent loss of a close family member. The therapeutic goal for the next session is to explore additional emotions tied to this bereavement.
  - Informal: The client said she was sad over losing her father, however I felt that there was more to it than that.

2. Case Notes

- For the purpose of this application, case notes should be 3-5 sentences per session and should include:
  - A brief description of the main issues addressed in the session and progress compared to the previous session.
  - Modalities employed and reason for doing so - e.g. Gestalt therapy, Satir Change Process, CBT, EFT.
  - Interventions used and reason for doing so - e.g. “empty chair”, paradoxical intervention, CBT worksheet.
- Case notes must be securely stored to ensure maximum security and confidentiality, either password-protected (digital notes) or in a locked cupboard (physical notes).
- Case notes can be submitted to certified organizations for academic, professional, or legal purposes, such as for accreditation, certification, or court investigations. They must not be shown to anyone else for any other purpose.
  - Include methodologies and theories employed.
  - Avoid identifiable details such as names, schools, or institutions. Generic city, country, or continent names are acceptable.
  - Use client numbers: do not use their real name or initials.
  - Use the client’s preferred pronouns.
  - Mention race, religion, or gender only if directly relevant to the case.
- Case notes submitted to ACT as part of the Client Contact Form (Form C) must be dated within the past 3 years, starting from the date that the applicant begins preparing their application documents (after the initial application form has been approved).
- Retain case notes for seven years before destroying them or in compliance with Thai law.

*Please see the table below for more details on what should and should not be included in your personal case notes and session summary notes.

3. Supervision Log

- For the supervision log, no academic citation is required and informal language is acceptable, as long as it is clear, respectful, and appropriate.
- There is no word limit per entry, however our general guideline is 100 words.
- The supervision log contains Supervision Notes and Personal Reflection, the differences are outlined below:
  - Supervision Notes are a concise summary of the case discussed in the supervision session.
  - Personal Reflections demonstrate a counselor's awareness of internal processes and how the case/supervision affected them, including personal growth, triggers, or emotional responses.

Case Notation Guidelines

The general templates below have been provided to help guide applicants in preparing the comprehensive documentation required throughout the counseling process. These templates will also provide guidance and clarity on the documents required for ACT application:

1.Client Intake Form: The purpose of the Client Intake Form is to collect essential client information that is often relevant towards the counseling process. This information allows the counselor to gain some insight into the client in preparation for the first session. The Client Intake Form should include:

- Name
- *Guardian name (if the client is a minor)
- Email/Contact
- Phone number
- Birthday
- Emergency contact (name and number)
- Nationality
- Relationship status
- Reason for seeking therapy
- Rate emotional distress
- Currently taking medication or not

2. Client Consent Form: The purpose of the Client Consent Form is to inform clients of their rights and responsibilities within the counseling relationship, as well as the terms and conditions of their entering into a client agreement with you or your organization. If the Consent Form is physical, the client must provide their signature on the form. If the form is digital, clearly state that by clicking "Agree" and submitting the form they are acknowledging their rights and responsibilities.

*Client Consent and and Client Intake forms can be either combined or separate. See Appendix 1 for templates of both.

3. Treatment Plan: Treatment plans are usually developed after 2-3 sessions once the counselor has delved more into various areas of the client's background. Even though basic information may have already been provided on the intake form, counselors must gain a more in-depth understanding of the client before formulating a treatment plan. The treatment plan should outline the methodologies and modalities you plan to employ, as well as your goals for each particular client. See Appendix 2 for a suggested template.

4. Case Notes: Documentation of each session is essential in maintaining a clear and organized record of the case's progression. It ensures that key details, interventions, and client developments are accurately captured, providing a foundation for informed decision-making and continuity of care. Please see our suggested template in Appendix 6.3.

There are two types of records: 1) Case Notes (session summaries), and 2) Personal Notes. ACT only requires case notes for applications. The differences are outlined below:

Case Notes	Personal Notes
Formal	May be formal or informal
Concise 3-5 sentence summaries.	No length restrictions.
Required for ACT application.	Private and fully confidential.
Objective summary of session, avoid subjective opinions and descriptions.	Can include personal thoughts and opinions such as “I think”, “I felt”.
Include methodologies and theories employed during the session.	Include methodologies and theories employed during the session.
No identifiable names or initials, only use client number.	Can use names and/or initials.
No unique names of schools, institutions, or districts.	Can include names of schools, institutions, or districts if relevant.
Generic city, country, continent names are acceptable.	Generic city, country, continent names are acceptable.
Only include religion, race, or gendered language if it is directly relevant to the case.	Can include religion, race, or gendered language for personal recollection.
Use the client’s preferred pronouns.	Use the client’s preferred pronouns.

5. Closing Notes: The purpose of closing notes is for counselors to evaluate the effectiveness of treatment. After the last session, provide the client with a form asking them general questions regarding their mental health, compare them with the Client Intake Form or notes from your first session to assess their progress and recovery. Additionally, it is also possible to ask clients to fill out the same form on their first session in order to gain a clear picture of their mental health before and after counseling. Suggested template for Closing Notes in Appendix 3.

Supervision Guidelines

Supervision in counseling is when a counselor uses the professional services of another credible counselor or psychotherapist to review how they work with their clients. Supervision ensures that counselors receive documented guidance to reflect on their practice, enhance skills, and maintain ethical standards. This process is part of the counselor's personal and professional development. ACT requires a minimum number of annual supervision hours to uphold accountability and support counselor development.

The role of a supervisor is to guide and support counselors in developing their skills. Supervisors ensure that the counselor maintains ethical boundaries with the client, and that the relationship remains solely professional. Supervisors are also responsible for maintaining ethical boundaries with their supervisee. It is sometimes inevitable for the supervisee to discuss personal issues that may be affecting their counseling process with their supervisor. However, personal elements brought up during supervision should always be related to the supervisee's practice and contribute to enhancing their skills as a counselor. A key aspect of this is recognizing that supervision is not a therapy session. If the conversation veers into therapeutic territory, the supervisor must advise the counselor to seek external therapy to maintain clear professional boundaries. This distinction helps preserve the integrity of both the supervisory and therapeutic roles.

1. ACT Supervisor Qualifications: Counselors who meet all requirements below can apply to become a certified ACT supervisor, as seen below:

- Be an ACT accredited counselor (AC) or equivalent, with more than 5 years of experience as an accredited counselor.
- Successfully complete an ACT-approved supervision course.
- A supervisor must be a qualified counselor or a psychology/counseling professor at a recognized institute.

2. Recommended Supervision Hours:

- Internship: 1 supervision hour for every 5 counseling hours or when needed, scheduled immediately or soon after the 5th session takes place.
- Practicing Counselor: practicing counselors should have supervision at least once per month throughout the duration of their career.

3. Supervision Notes: Supervisees must take supervision notes to maintain an accurate record of their supervision hours. These notes serve as an essential tool for documenting the content and progress of each supervision session, ensuring that the supervisee can integrate the feedback received. Additionally, these records are crucial for evidencing the fulfillment of supervision requirements, whether for certification, accreditation, or professional development. The notes should include a concise summary of the key topics discussed, insights gained, challenges addressed, and any action plans or goals set during the session. Proper documentation not only supports accountability but also aids in the supervisee's professional growth and development as a practitioner. Please refer to the Guidelines for Professional Language; for supervision notes, no academic citation is required and informal language is acceptable, as long as it is clear, respectful, and appropriate. See Appendix 6.5 for a template of Supervision notes.

4. Supervisor Reference Form:
Those applying to be a Registered Counselor (RC) or Accredited Counselor (AC) with ACT must ask their supervisor(s) to fill out the Supervisor Reference Form linked here. This form ensures that the applicant is undergoing regular supervision with a qualified supervisor and serves as a professional reference testifying to the applicant's skills as a counselor.

5. Cost of Supervision:
The ACT has an approved list of qualified supervisors that you can contact for supervision, but other qualified supervisors are also acceptable. The cost of supervision may vary greatly, please discuss the exact cost with your chosen supervisor. Supervision costs are to be absorbed by the applicant themselves.

Intervision Guidelines
Intervision is a form of peer counseling where three or more counseling professionals come together to discuss cases, share experiences, and provide mutual support and feedback. Its purpose is to enhance professional growth, encourage collaboration, exchange peer review and feedback, and strengthen team dynamics by fostering trust and open communication. Intervision also promotes problem-solving through diverse perspectives, helping participants develop new insights and approaches.

1. Frequency — ACT recommends that you hold regularly scheduled intervision sessions at minimum once per month and keep notes for the benefit of the team.
2. Intervision Notes — Similarly to supervision notes, intervision notes document the insights gained during each intervision session, providing valuable evidence for team growth, reflection, and best practice examples. See Appendix 4 for a template of Intervision notes.
3. Structure — To ensure a structured and productive meeting, an intervision agenda may include some of all of the following components:
    - Introduction and Attendance
    - Reflection exercise: A question or activity that prompts participants to reflect on their own experiences, emotions, and wellbeing. Counseling focuses on the client's emotions, therefore it is crucial that counselors are in touch with their own as well.
    - Case studies: One in-depth case study per Intervision session where the chosen counselor shares a case that they found difficult, that they thought was interesting, or that they would appreciate insight on. The person presenting the case study should include: presenting issues, relevant client background, conceptualization, treatment goals, and counseling progress. Counselors should alternate doing case studies on a regular basis.
    - Research presentations: ACT recommends alternating case studies with research presentations, with each counselor in the group presenting at least one research topic per year related to their Continuing Professional Development learnings, a specific counseling methodology, developments in the mental health field, a relevant news items, or other related topics in order to enhance the knowledge of their peers.

ACT Membership Benefits

ACT membership offers a number of benefits designed to support and create valuable opportunities for counselors in Thailand:

1. Collaboration and Networking: ACT membership gives you the opportunity to meet other counselors, creating opportunities for collaboration, sharing knowledge, gaining support, and mutual learning. Forging connections with other counselors is a great way to learn new things to apply to your own counseling practice, as well as opening doors to potential partnerships and referrals. Additionally, ACT members will gain connections to professional supervisors and experts in the field, helping them enhance their practice with expert guidance. We have regular meetings and events throughout the year to build relationships and expand mental health awareness.

2. Professional Development: Gain access to workshops, courses, certifications, seminars, and webinars about counseling and mental health that contribute towards your professional development and growth at a discounted rate. These workshops are a great opportunity to improve your knowledge and expand your skills. ACT-approved workshops will count towards your annual continuing professional development (CPD) hours.

3. International Recognition and Potential for Transferable Hours (TBC): ACT membership provides a pathway to international recognition, opening doors for practicing counselors to gain credibility across borders. Counseling hours may be transferable across certain countries with similar requirements, allowing members to move forward with their practice when moving to different regions or pursuing further qualifications (subject to confirmation of transfer agreements).

4. ACT Library: ACT has amassed a large collection of excellent resources in the field of counseling. We are dedicated to raising funds in order to develop a digital library and translate important resources and publications from English to Thai in order to increase accessibility. In the meantime, members will be able to access the physical ACT Library upon request.

5. Supervision: ACT gives access to a network of qualified Supervisors to support counselors in deepening their understanding of methodologies, discuss challenging cases, and reflect on their personal growth as a mental health professional.

6. Intervision: ACT provides opportunities for counselors to gather and engage in peer-led support, fostering collaboration, reflection, and team building. Through regular Intervision sessions, members can exchange methods, discuss case studies, and address challenges in a supportive environment. Intervision strengthens professional growth, encourages mutual learning, and promotes a sense of community among counselors.

7. Global Mental Health Developments: Stay informed on the latest developments of mental health practices according to international standards so that your own practice is updated to the highest standard of quality.

ACT Membership Responsibilities

As a valued member of ACT, you are entrusted with the following responsibilities:

1. Adherence to Ethical Standards: We ask our members to uphold the highest ethical standards possible in all professional endeavors, ensuring integrity, accountability, and respect in any interactions with clients, colleagues, and the community.

2. Commitment to Continuous Learning: Engage in continuing professional development activities to enhance your knowledge, skills, and competencies in counseling. Stay updated on emerging trends, practices, and advancements in mental health and counseling.

3. Active Participation: Contribute to the ACT community by participating in events, workshops, and discussions. Share your expertise, insights, opinions, and experiences to enrich the learning of fellow members.

4. Professional Conduct: Conduct yourself in a manner that reflects positively on the counseling profession and ACT. Maintain professionalism, confidentiality, and respect for diversity in all interactions.

5. Compliance with Membership Policies: Adhere to the policies and guidelines outlined by ACT regarding membership, accreditation, and professional conduct. Ensure compliance with all relevant regulations and standards.

6. Supporting the Mission and Values: Agreement with ACT's mission statement, goals, and values of ACT; embody these goals in your counseling practice.

Please make sure that your full name is on all of the pages you submit. This is of immense help to the accreditation team when they are managing the paperwork.

Once completed, all your forms should be emailed to anna@ncsbkk.com.

Your application fee depending on the type of accreditation you are applying for must be paid online through our Application Form. Our application fees are below:

- Accredited Counselor (AC) – 2,500 THB application fee
- Registered Counselor (RC) – 1,000 THB application fee
- Fellow Member (FM), Associate Member (AM), Junior Member (JM) – no accreditation or application fee needed, only annual membership fee.

ACT Code of Ethics

We are committed to making sure that all counselors registered with the Accredited Counselors of Thailand (ACT) meet the highest standards for ethical and professional counseling services. The purpose of this Code of Ethics is to establish the standards of ethical practice for counselors registered with the ACT for the information and protection of those using their services.

For the purpose of this Code of Ethics, the term counselor is used to include psychologists and psychotherapists. The term supervisor refers to professional counseling supervision rather than management. The term client refers to individuals, couples, families, groups, or communities, as applicable.

The guidelines are divided into two sections:

Ethical Principles* and *Ethical Responsibilities

Ethical Principles

- Counselors respect the essential humanity, worth, and dignity of all people and promote this value in their work.
- Counselors recognize and respect diversity among people and oppose discrimination and oppressive behavior. Counselors will create an inclusive and welcoming environment for all clients.
- Counselors respect the privacy of their clients and preserve the confidentiality of information acquired in the course of their work, unless disclosure is mandated by law or is necessary to prevent harm.
- Counselors protect the rights of their clients including the right to informed consent.
- Counselors take steps to maintain and develop their competence throughout their professional lives.
- Counselors abide by the laws of the society in which they practice.
- Counselors act with honesty, integrity, and transparency in all professional interactions. They avoid engaging in any activities that may compromise professional integrity or bring disrepute to the counseling profession.

Ethical Responsibilities

1.Responsibilities to the client

- Counselors will obtain informed consent from clients before initiating any counseling or therapeutic interventions. They will provide clear information about the nature, purpose, risks, and potential benefits of the services offered.
- Counselors take all reasonable steps to avoid physical, mental, and/or emotional harm to their clients and/or the general public as a result of the counseling process.
- Counselors faced with situations which extend beyond the boundary of their competence seek supervision and consider referral to other professionals.
- Counselors promote client autonomy and encourage clients to make responsible decisions on their own behalf.
- Counselors consider the social context of their clients and their connections to others.
- Counselors are responsible for setting and maintaining professional boundaries within the counseling relationship.
- Counselors avoid any other relationship with their clients which is detrimental to the therapeutic purpose.
- If a relationship other than counseling is present, counselors demonstrate careful consideration of ethical issues raised including power imbalance and confidentiality.

2. Exploitation

- Counselors must not exploit clients, past or present, whether financially, sexually, emotionally, or in any other way.
- Counselors will not accept or offer payments for referrals, or engage in any financial transactions, apart from negotiating the ordinary fee charged for counseling.
- Sexual relations between the client and counselor is never acceptable and constitutes unethical behavior. This is not restricted to sexual intercourse and includes any form of physical and/or romantic contact, whether initiated by the client or the counselor, which has as its purpose some form of sexual and/or romantic gratification, or which may be reasonably construed as having that purpose.
- Counselors should consider that the deeper the involvement with the client's emotional life during counseling, the less likely the possibility of a subsequent equal relationship following termination of therapy. Counselors must seek professional supervision should any attempt to build a relationship with a former client be considered.

3. Confidentiality

- Counselors treat with confidence any personal information about clients, whether obtained directly or by inference. This applies to all verbal, written, recorded, or computer stored material pertaining to the therapeutic context. All records, whether in written or any other form, need to be protected with the strictest of confidence.
- Clients must not be observed by anyone other than their counselors without having given informed consent. This applies both to direct observation and to any form of audio or visual transmission or recording.
- Counselors and supervisors are responsible for protecting the client's rights of confidentiality in the supervisory context by ensuring that shared information is disguised appropriately.
- Exceptional circumstances may arise which give the counselor good grounds for believing that the client will cause serious physical harm to others or themselves. In such circumstances, the breaking of confidentiality may be required, preferably with the client's permission, or after consultation with a counseling supervisor.
- Any breaking of confidentiality should be minimized both by restricting the information conveyed to that which is essential to the immediate situation and by limiting it to people who can provide the help required by the client.
- Agreements about confidentiality continue after the client's death unless there are overriding legal considerations.
- Special care is required when using specific counseling situations for reports and publication. The author must have the client's informed consent should there be any possibility of identification of the client.
- In situations where a client considers harming themself, the No-Harm Contract will be signed by client and counselor.
- Forms regarding releasing or obtaining information need to be signed in situations that require such information.

4. Contracts

- Counseling activities are to be undertaken only with professional intent and not casually and/or in extra professional relationships.
- Contracts involving the client should be realistic and clear.
- When a client is incapable of giving informed consent, counselors must obtain consent from a legally authorized person.
- Any publicity material and all written and oral information should accurately reflect the nature of the service offered and the training, qualifications, and relevant experience of the counselor.
- Counselors are responsible for communicating the terms on which counseling is being offered.
- Counselors will disclose any conflict of interest which may arise in relation to a client and will seek supervision to resolve appropriate action, which may include referral.

5. Professional Competence

a) Responsibilities to yourself as a counselor

- Counselors registered with ACT commit to maintaining and enhancing their professional competence through continuous education and training, staying informed about current research, best practices, and ethical guidelines in the field of counseling. A certain number of CPD hours is required annually depending on your membership tier.

- Annual CPD requirements are as follows:
  - Fellow Member (FM) – N/A
  - Accredited Counselor (AC) – 40 hours annually
  - Registered Counselor (RC) – 32 hours annually
  - Associate Member (AM) – "Foundations of Counseling" course in the first year of membership, followed by at least one ACT workshop or course of choice annually
  - Junior Member (JM) – 16 hours annually

- Counselors do not counsel when their functioning is significantly impaired by personal or emotional difficulties, illness, alcohol, drugs or any other causes.

- Counselors have regular supervision and use supervision to develop counseling skills, monitor performance, and provide accountability for practice.

- Counselors will only offer services within the scope of their expertise and qualifications.

b) Responsibilities to other counselors

- Counselors do not conduct themselves in their counseling-related activities in ways which undermine public confidence in either their role as counselors or in the work of other counselors.

- Counselors are committed to the Code of Ethics of ACT which includes procedures to withdraw membership for unethical practice. If a counselor's accreditation is revoked after due process, the withdrawal status will be reflected in the online registry.

- Counselors registered with the ACT have a duty to report any suspected violations of this Code of Ethics to management within the organization or the ACT board.

- Counselors do not solicit the clients of other counselors. They have an obligation not to impair the work of their colleagues. Nevertheless, counselors need to be aware of the client's right to seek a second opinion.

c) Responsibilities to the wider community

- Counselors work within the laws of the country where they are currently practicing.

- Counselors take all reasonable steps to be aware of current legislation affecting their work.

- Counselors are committed to protect the public against incompetent and dishonorable practices and are prepared to challenge these practices.

6. Complaint Procedure

- The procedure to be followed in the event of a complaint of unethical conduct against a fellow member of the ACT may be found in our bylaws.
- Disciplinary procedures must include the possibility that a counselor can be debarred from membership or registration. This would automatically lead to removal from the ACT.
- Each member must have an appeal mechanism including the involvement of a person outside the counseling profession, such as an independent mediator.
- Notification of the withdrawal of a member from the ACT following complaint will be given to all associations on whose register the person is listed.

This code of ethics will be reviewed periodically, and updates will be communicated to all members of the ACT.

Glossary

- Minimum training hours – course work and internship hours from your Bachelor/Master's degree and additional certifications or trainings you attended that add up to the required amount of hours.
- Client contact hours – includes face to face, phone, or online counseling in an ongoing therapeutic process from the past 3 years with proper documentation.
- Non-contact hours – includes intervision, reporting, readings, practicum videos, team meetings, case referrals, emails, as well as giving workshops or trainings.
- Supervision – a meeting between a counselor and their supervisor in order to supervise and reflect on the counselor's practice, and for the counselor to discuss challenging cases or questions with an experienced mentor. Supervision helps counselors improve their practice, and ensures that they are practicing ethically.
- Continuing Professional Development (CPD) – attending workshops, trainings, reading, courses (that go beyond the minimum training hours). The required number of CPD is annual, meaning that you need a certain number of CPD hours every year.
- Intervision – a meeting between counselors to do reflection, case study, and to share and consult each other on their practice.
- Case Study – you are required to write a 2,000-3,000 word case study demonstrating your counseling methods and practice. Full instructions can be found in Form G.
- Case Notes – information about the session, the client's presenting issues, background, progress, modalities and interventions used, and why you chose these methods.
- Supervision Notes – brief description of the case discussed and progress made during supervision. Informal language is acceptable, as long as it is clear, respectful, and appropriate. There is no word limit per entry, however our general guideline is 100 words.
- Notes – a brief description of the activity, course, workshop, or training listed.
- Personal Reflection – answer the questions: How did this help me grow as a counselor? What did I learn from this as a counselor? How does this inform or affect my counseling approach?
- Audit – an RC or AC may be randomly selected at any time for an official audit by ACT, during which they must resubmit all their accreditation evidence.
- Specializations – In addition to annual CPD, counselors with specializations such as EMDR, somatic therapy, Satir therapy, etc., are expected to continuously update their knowledge and practice their specialization.
- Annual supervision log – 12 hours of supervision is required annually to keep your registration active.
- Annual CPD – a specified number of CPD hours per membership level is required annually to keep your registration active.
- Annual activity – you must attend at least one ACT workshop or networking event per year to keep your membership active.

*Deadline for annual logs (Forms I1-3) – November 15th of each year

Appendix

Appendix 1 – Client Intake Form & Client Consent Form

1.Client Intake Form: The purpose of the Client Intake Form is to collect essential client information that is often relevant towards the counseling process. This information allows the counselor to gain some insight into the client in preparation for the first session. The Client Intake Form should include:

- Name
- *Guardian name (if the client is a minor)
- Email/Contact
- Phone number
- Birthday
- Emergency contact (name and number)
- Nationality
- Relationship status
- Reason for seeking therapy
- Rate emotional distress
- Currently taking medication or not

2. Client Consent Form: The purpose of the Client Consent Form is to inform clients of their rights and responsibilities within the counseling relationship, as well as the terms and conditions of their entering into a client agreement with you or your organization. If the Consent Form is physical, the client must provide their signature on the form. If the form is digital, clearly state that by clicking “Agree” and submitting the form they are acknowledging their rights and responsibilities.
*Client Consent and and Client Intake forms can be either combined or separate. Click here for our example template. Please note that this example combines the Client Consent and Intake forms.

Appendix 2 – Treatment Plan

Treatment plans are usually developed after 2-3 sessions once the counselor has delved more into various areas of the client's background. Even though basic information may have already been provided on the intake form, counselors must gain a more in-depth understanding of the client before formulating a treatment plan. The treatment plan should outline the methodologies and modalities you plan to employ, as well as your goals for each particular client. Your treatment plan should include the following:

1. Client Information & Background
   - Name
   - Age
   - First session date
   - Family background
   - Cultural background
   - Nationality
   - Ethnicity
   - Occupation
   - Relationship to others and to self
   - Lifestyle

*Note - some of this information may be taken from the Client Intake Form, while other points may be gathered during the first 2-3 sessions.

2. Presenting issue(s)
   - Presenting issue – How long has this issue been prevalent? How has it progressed?
   - Previous treatment – Has the client seen other counselors or received other treatment before?
   - Diagnoses (if applicable) – Does the client have any existing diagnoses? If not, do you recommend seeing a psychiatrist?

3. Treatment Goals
   - Client's goals – what goals does the client have for themselves?
   - Goals addressing diagnosis and/or presenting and perceived issues – If the client has more than one diagnosis, the counselor should set specific goals for each one directly relating to those symptoms.
   - Mutual goals – Goals agreed upon by the client and the counselor.
   - Counseling Objectives – break larger goals up into smaller and achievable steps. For example, a general goal may be to lower the client's anxiety — what steps are you planning to take to achieve this goal?

4. Treatment Method
   - Modalities – Modalities the counselor plans to use and how it will be implemented, for example, CBT, Satir Therapy, etc.

- Interventions – Interventions the counselor plans to use and how it will be implemented, for example, the Empty Chair method, CBT worksheet, etc.
- Type of therapy – individual, couples, or family. Certain couples may need individual sessions, while family therapy may be suggested to individuals as part of the treatment plan (with the client's consent). These factors should be taken into account as part of the treatment plan.
- Client responsibilities – activities or treatment methods that the counselor asks the client to do outside the session, for example, breathing exercises, relaxation techniques, journaling, etc.
- Strengths and weaknesses – Identify the client's strengths and weaknesses, implement their strengths in the treatment plan and take their weaknesses into account.
- Individualized treatment – The treatment method should take the client's personal circumstances (1.) into account. People have unique experiences with similar issues, therefore individual experiences and needs should be integrated into the treatment plan.

5. Time and Frequency
   - Session frequency – how often sessions will occur.
   - Target dates – set dates/sessions for achieving certain goals together with the client.
   - Estimated length of treatment
6. Documentation
   - Case notes – Documentation of each session is essential in maintaining a clear and organized record of the case's progression. It ensures that key details, interventions, and client developments are accurately captured, providing a foundation for informed decision-making, continuity of care, whether you are on track with your treatment goals, and how the treatment plan should be adjusted.
7. The SMART Method
   - The treatment plan and counseling goals and objectives should be SMART:
     - Specific – break the treatment plan down into specific, detailed steps in order to make it achievable.
     - Measurable – progress should be measurable throughout the counseling process, whether through assessments, questionnaires, observations, or conversations with the client.
     - Achievable – the treatment plan and goals should be achievable - are your target dates and estimated length of treatment realistic? How much can the client realistically achieve outside the sessions?
     - Relevant – treatment plan and goals are directly related to the presenting issue or diagnoses.
     - Time-bound – include estimated length of treatment and target dates to help measure progress and keep the treatment plan on track.

Appendix 3 – Closing Notes

The purpose of closing notes is for counselors to evaluate the effectiveness of treatment. After the last session, provide the client with a form asking them general questions regarding their mental health, compare them with the Client Intake Form or notes from your first session to assess their progress and recovery. It is also possible to ask clients to fill out the same form they did pre-therapy in order to gain a clear picture of their mental health before and after counseling. Click here for our suggested template for a post-assessment.

Appendix 4 – Intervision Notes

Similarly to supervision notes, intervision records document the insights gained during each intervision session, providing valuable evidence for team growth, reflection, and best practice examples. Click here or see our suggested template for Intervision notes on the next page.

Organization Name) Intervision
Day Month, Year
Minutes by _____

Date: D/M/Y
Time:
Location:

Reflection by ____

- A question or activity that prompts participants to reflect on their own experiences, emotions, and wellbeing. Counselling focuses on the client's emotions, therefore it is crucial that counselors are in touch with their own as well.

Agenda

- For organizations where there are company updates that are relevant to everyone in attendance.

Case Study/Research Presentation by ____

- One in-depth case study per Intervision session where the chosen counselor shares a case that they found difficult, that they thought was interesting, or that they would appreciate insight on. The person presenting the case study should include:
  - Essential client background and information
  - Presenting issue
  - Related underlying issues
  - Diagnoses (if applicable) and whether the client is on medication
  - Summary of previous sessions
  - Modalities and interventions used so far and results
  - Progress made.

*Counselors should alternate doing case studies on a regular basis.

- Research presentations: ACT recommends alternating case studies with research presentations, with each counselor in the group presenting at least one research presentation per year related to counseling, mental health, or other relevant and related topics in order to enhance the knowledge of their peers.

Attendance

- Present –
- Absent –

Housekeeping

- Next intervision on ___

Appendix 5 – Courses for CPD hours

Please note that the courses listed above are recommendations, you are welcome to choose alternative courses offered by certified organizations, professionals, or specialists to fulfill your annual CPD requirements. ACT encourages flexibility in selecting training that meets your professional needs and aligns with high standards of practice. If you find a course that proves to be valuable, ACT will review and evaluate it. Upon approval, it may be added to our list of recommended courses for future reference. Click here to find our list of suggested courses.

Appendix 6 – ACT Application Forms

Appendix 6 includes templates for all the required forms applicants must submit when applying for ACT accreditation at both the Registered Counselor (RC) and Accredited Counselor (AC) levels.

Appendix 6.1 – Personal Details (Form A)

All applicants will be required to fill out an application form (Form A) with their personal details and a general overview of their qualifications. Click here to see the Form A.

Appendix 6.2 – Minimum Training Hours (Form B)

Minimum training hours – course work and internship hours from your Bachelor/Master's/Doctoral degree and additional certifications or trainings you attended that add up to the required amount of hours.
Notes – a brief description of the activity, course, workshop, or training listed.

Course Title/Certification	Organization/Institute (if applicable)	Date	No. of Hours	Link to Certificate/Transcript
Example: Satir model in clinical daily practice series: how to help patients with loss and grief	Satir Association for Human Development and Psychotherapy (SADP)	September 2018	30 hours
Sandplay Therapy and Symbol Work Certification	Expressive Therapies Australia	10 June 2023 - 15 January 2024	80 hours
Master's Degree in Counseling Psychology	Assumption University	June 2021 - March 2023	2000
			Total Hours:

Appendix 6.3 – Client Contact Hours (Form C)

Client contact hours – includes face to face, phone, or online counseling in an ongoing therapeutic process from the past 3 years with proper documentation.
Case Notes – information about the session, the client's presenting issues, background, progress, modalities and interventions used, and why you chose these methods.

Date	Mode	Client ID	Session No.	No. of Hours	Case Notes	Supervisor Signature
27/1/25	Online	C0001	1	1	Example: The client expressed experiencing profound grief related to the recent loss of a close family member. The therapeutic goal for the next session is to explore additional emotions tied to this bereavement (Grief Cycle Kobler Ross).
27/1/25	F2F	C0002	5	1	We continued exploring the client's childhood trauma (Psychodynamic therapy) and his grief due to the recent loss of his mother. The client realized that his unresolved feelings towards his late mother are impacting his mental health. He says that he is "uncomfortable" confiding in his friends. Intervention used - Empty Chair (Gestalt therapy), asked the client to picture his mother in order to help him express the things he was unable to say when she was still alive. The intervention gave him a safe space to voice the emotions that he had kept to himself for so long.
				Total Hours:

1.For the purpose of this application, case notes should be 3-5 sentences per session and should include:

- A brief description of the main issues addressed in the session and progress compared to the previous session
- Modalities employed and reason for doing so – e.g. Gestalt therapy, Satir Change Process, CBT, EFT
- Interventions used and reason for doing so – e.g. "empty chair," paradoxical intervention, CBT worksheet

2. Case notes must be securely stored to ensure maximum security and confidentiality, either password-protected (digital notes) or in a locked cupboard (physical notes).

3. Case notes can be submitted to certified organizations for academic, professional, or legal purposes, such as for accreditation, certification, or court investigations. They must not be shown to anyone else for any other purpose.

- Include methodologies and theories employed.
- Avoid identifiable details such as names, schools, or institutions. Generic city, country, or continent names are acceptable.
- Use client numbers: do not use their real name or initials.
- Use the client's preferred pronouns.
- Mention race, religion, or gender only if directly relevant to the case.

4. Case notes submitted to ACT as part of the Client Contact Form (Form C) must be dated within the past 3 years, starting from the date that the applicant begins preparing their application documents (after the initial application form has been approved).

5. Retain case notes for seven years before destroying them or in compliance with Thai law.

There are two types of records: 1) Case Notes (session summaries), and 2) Personal Notes. ACT only requires case notes for applications. The differences are outlined below:

Case Notes	Personal Notes
Formal	May be formal or informal
Concise 3-5 sentence summaries.	No length restrictions.
Required for ACT application.	Private and fully confidential.
Objective summary of session, avoid subjective opinions and descriptions.	Can include personal thoughts and opinions such as "I think", "I felt".
Include methodologies and theories employed during the session.	Include methodologies and theories employed during the session.
No identifiable names or initials, only use client number.	Can use names and/or initials.
No unique names of schools, institutions, or districts.	Can include names of schools, institutions, or districts if relevant.
Generic city, country, continent names are acceptable.	Generic city, country, continent names are acceptable.
Only include religion, race, or gendered language if it is directly relevant to the case.	Can include religion, race, or gendered language for personal recollection.
Use the client's preferred pronouns.	Use the client's preferred pronouns.

Appendix 6.4 – Non-Contact Hours (Form D)

Non-contact hours – includes intervision, reporting, readings, practicum videos, team meetings, case referrals, emails, as well as giving workshops or trainings.
Notes – a brief description of the activity, course, workshop, or training listed.

Date	No. of Hours	Activity & Notes
May- June 2025	17	Example: Reading The Seven Principles for Making Marriage Work - John M. Gottman, PhD Read both the English version and Thai translation. Used for couples counseling, convey to clients that friendship is the pillar of a strong relationship.
May 2025	15	Reporting for counseling sessions in May.
5 May 2025	2	Intervision Reflection - How do you process grief? Case Study - Client experiencing severe depression, engages in self-harming behaviors. Discussed protocol for handling self-harm cases and ensuring client safety.
	Total Hours:

Appendix 6.5 – Supervision Log (Form E)

Supervision – a meeting between a counselor and their supervisor in order to supervise and reflect on the counselor's practice, and for the counselor to discuss challenging cases or questions with an experienced mentor. Supervision helps counselors improve their practice, and ensures that they are practicing ethically.
Supervision Notes – brief description of the case discussed and progress made during supervision. Informal language is acceptable, as long as it is clear, respectful, and appropriate. There is no word limit per entry, however our general guideline is 100 words.
Personal Reflection – answer the questions: How did this help me grow as a counselor? What did I learn from this as a counselor? How does this inform or affect my counseling approach?

Date	Mode	Client ID	No. of Hours	Supervision Notes	Personal Reflection	Supervisor Signature
20/1/25	F2F	C0001	2	Example - Discussed couples case that I found very challenging. The clients are an interracial couple with a young child. They have been having a lot of arguments lately. Supervisor advice - further explore the cause of their arguments, is there a recurring theme? Find the root of the issue. How is this affecting their child? Suggested doing separate sessions with each of them later on, supervisor agreed as this will give them space to voice thoughts and emotions that they may not be ready to express to each other yet.	I found this case challenging as it triggered some of my own childhood experiences with my parents. During the session I reminded myself to take a deep breath and to look at the case from a counselor's perspective, being careful not to let my personal experience affect my counseling. Discussing the case with my supervisor has helped me feel more equipped in keeping my feelings separate from the client's.
			Total Hours:

Appendix 6.6 – Supervisor Reference (Form F)

Applicants must ask their supervisor(s) to fill out the Supervisor Reference Form linked here. This form ensures that the applicant is undergoing regular supervision with a qualified supervisor and serves as a professional reference testifying to the applicant's skills as a counselor.

Appendix 6.7 – Case Study (Form G)

Applicants are required to write a 2,000-3,000 word case study demonstrating their counseling methods and practice. Full instructions are linked here.

Appendix 6.8 – Reflective Essay (Form H)

*Only applicable for AC level.
Counselors applying for AC status must write a 2,000-3,000 word essay based on the topic given below:
"How my worldview and ethics inform my counseling practice."

Appendix 6.9 – Annual Logs (Form I-1)

The Annual Supervision Log is not required for application. However, it must be completed annually in the following years in order to maintain active registration. The template and requirements remain the same as those outlined in the Supervision Log (Form E).

Annual supervision log – 12 hours of supervision is required annually to keep your registration active.
Supervision Notes – brief description of the case discussed and progress made during supervision.
Personal Reflection – answer the questions: How did this help me grow as a counselor? What did I learn from this as a counselor? How does this inform or affect my counseling approach?

Date	Mode	Client ID	No. of Hours	Supervision Notes	Personal Reflection	Supervisor Signature
			Total Hours:

Appendix 6.10 – Annual CPD Log (Form I-2)

The Annual CPD Log is not required for application. However, it must be completed annually in the following years in order to maintain an active registration.

Annual CPD – a specified number of CPD hours per membership level is required annually to keep your registration active.
Notes – a brief description of the activity, course, workshop, training, reading, or practicum video listed.
